Gov. Healey to speak at Annual Meeting

By Jennifer Kavanaugh

After finishing an eventful first year as governor, Maura Healey will address local officials from across the state during the Opening Session of the MMA Annual Meeting & Trade Show on Jan. 19 in Boston.

Healey’s appearance comes a couple days after her first annual State of the Commonwealth address and a few days before her state budget plan is due to be filed with the Legislature — and while municipal leaders await details about her local aid proposals for fiscal 2025.

Healey is also expected to address some of her stated priorities, such as housing creation and addressing climate change, as well as the state-local partnership and current fiscal conditions.

Over the past year, the Healey-Driscoll administration has been working to address housing and economic development needs, climate change, an influx of migrants and an emergency shelter crisis, infrastructure concerns, and the need for operational and safety upgrades at the MBTA, to name a few.

Accomplishments include separating the Executive Office of Housing and Economic Development into two distinct offices and creating a housing secretariat; naming the state’s first-ever climate chief; launching the first “green bank” in the country dedicated to affordable housing; unveiling a $4.1 billion housing bond bill to increase housing production and promote housing affordability; launching the ResilientCoasts initiative to address impacts of climate change; and unveiling an economic development plan in early December.

During her MMA Annual Meeting address last January, just days into her tenure as governor, Healey outlined her priorities and pledged that she and Lt. Gov. Kim Driscoll, the former mayor of Salem, would work closely with cities and towns.

“We do want to do great things,” she said. “I just want to begin with a recognition that I know things are challenging out there right now. Our job in government is to be great partners with all of you, as we work through those challenges.”

Healey emphasized the critical need to address the state’s housing shortage and urged local leaders to work with her on

MMA Annual Meeting approaches

By John Ouellette

In just a couple weeks, more than 1,200 municipal officials from across the state will gather in Boston for the 45th MMA Annual Meeting & Trade Show on Jan. 19 and 20.

If you haven’t registered yet to join them, you can do so now online — it only takes a couple minutes! (The early registration deadline is Jan. 10.)

Here are some of the great features this dynamic, timely and engaging conference, which is a forum for learning and a celebration of the innovations and best practices in community governance:

MMA Board identifies priorities for 2024

The MMA will always serve as the leading advocate fighting for municipal and school aid, and thus it is a given that our agenda for 2024 will prioritize a state revenue-sharing policy to increase Unrestricted General Government Aid by at least the same percentage growth rate as state tax revenues, and secure full funding of the Student Opportunity Act.

Beyond these “staple” issues, the MMA’s Board of Directors met in October — as it does each fall — to discuss, reaffirm and establish organizational priorities for the year ahead.

The following are three key, large-scale priorities highlighted by the board:

Municipal Infrastructure: The needs are extraordinary, and meeting them is more challenging than ever, given the resource limitations imposed by Proposition 2½, the crumbling state of our roads and bridges, environmental systems, and public safety and municipal buildings, and the rampant inflation in construction materials and labor.

Municipal infrastructure is more broadly defined than in the past, moving beyond “horizontal” (roads, bridges and pipes) to include “vertical” (buildings and facilities).

The MMA’s goals include winning permanent increases in Chapter 90 funding for local roads (aiming beyond our current $330 million-a-year target), securing sustained increases in funding for environmental systems, including drinking water, wastewater, stormwater, and climate resiliency, and launching a new state-funded program to address municipal building needs, modeled after the Massachusetts School Building Authority program, which would support local priorities such as public safety buildings, senior centers, community centers, and city and town halls.

Municipal Workforce Recruitment and Training: The tight labor market, combined with an aging workforce and a too-small talent pipeline, is creating significant problems for every community. Speciality positions that require expertise and training are extremely difficult to fill, including municipal finance roles, procurement officers, civil engineers, management positions — and even roles that have been historically easier to fill, such as police officers and teachers. An additional dimension is the imperative for cities and towns to advance diversity, equity and inclusion (DEI) in their workforces, to better represent their neighborhoods and attract the broadest range of talent, as DEI is an increasingly important priority for the rising generation of workers.

Sens. Warren, Markey to speak at MMA Annual Meeting

By John Ouellette

The state’s two U.S. senators, Elizabeth Warren and Ed Markey, will address local officials from across Massachusetts during the MMA Annual Meeting & Trade Show at the Hynes Convention Center in Boston on Saturday, Jan. 20.

The senators have consistently joined the two-day conference to engage with local elected and appointed leaders, and have collaborated closely with the MMA and local officials throughout their careers. They will speak during the MMA’s Annual Business Meeting on Saturday morning.

Warren and Markey are expected to discuss major federal initiatives to help cities and towns, particularly the American Rescue Plan Act, the Bipartisan Infrastructure Law, and the Inflation Reduction Act, which provide generational opportunities to shore up infrastructure and local services.

Both senators, along with the rest of the Massachusetts congressional delegation, were strong proponents of the historic Bipartisan Infrastructure Law and Inflation Reduction Act to help the country emerge from the COVID pandemic and to address the critical issue of climate change. They also supported important legislation to substantially increase flexibility in how ARPA funds can be spent by municipalities.

Sen. Warren was elected to the Senate in 2012 and re-elected in 2018. In the Senate, where she is vice chair of the Senate Democratic Caucus, she has focused on consumer protection, equitable economic opportunity, and the social safety net. A former law professor, she served as special advisor for the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau under President Barack Obama.

Sen. Markey has been a member of Congress since 1976 and a senator since 2013. Throughout his public service career, he has focused on issues including energy policy, environmental protection, telecommunications, transportation, infrastructure, public safety, privacy and consumer protection. He has been a leading voice in Congress on the issue of climate change.

Municipal finance changes included in FY23 supplemental budget law

By Jackie Lavender Bird

The closeout fiscal 2023 supplemental budget signed into law on Dec. 4 included a number of changes to modernize and streamline certain municipal finance rules.

The MMA had long advocated for the municipal finance changes, which are now in effect.

The changes, itemized in outside sections of the law, are as follows:

• Section 8 allows for a simple majority vote of the local legislative body, rather than a two-thirds vote, to draw down special purpose stabilization funds. A two-thirds vote is still required to establish both types of stabilization funds — general and special purpose — but the threshold has been lowered for drawing from special purpose funds.

• Section 9 allows municipal departments to repair property damages under $150,000 before the related insurance claim comes through, without seeking appropriation, with the expectation that appropriate accounts will be reimbursed when the insurance claim is paid. The municipality would be required to fund the deficit if the insurance claim is not received within a certain period.

• Section 9 also creates a “general fund revenue exception.” Under state law (Ch. 44, Sect. 53), all money received or collected from any source by a municipality belongs to its general fund and can only be spent after appropriation, unless a general or special law provides an exception. This rule can present accounting challenges when unexpected, conditional revenue is received, because the law requires this revenue to become part of the general fund even though it is intended for a specific purpose. As a result, these funds often become part of the next year’s free cash certification, creating confusion around how the funds can be used.

The law now allows municipalities, with authorization from the Division of Local Services’ director of accounts, to reserve such one-time revenue in a special fund, thus keeping it out of the general fund and preventing it from eventually becoming free cash. The language clarifies how the receipts in special funds can be spent: if the receipt is for one specific purpose, such as opioid settlement funds, a municipal executive would be able to spend the funds without further appropriation; otherwise, qualifying revenue reserved in a special fund would be subject to appropriation. In both cases, the exception applies only to one-time, unanticipated receipts that are received by multiple communities.

• Section 10 establishes a new Section 53k under Chapter 44, Section 53 to allow municipalities to create a special revenue fund (rather than using the general revenue fund) for funds coming to the municipality for a specific purpose. Municipalities often enter into host or mitigation agreements with developers or other entities to address the impacts of new development, and receive payments to mitigate these impacts. Section 10 allows communities to separately account for these payments and spend them for the dedicated purpose without further appropriation.

• Section 205 allows a city or town to amortize over fiscal 2025 through 2027 the amount of its fiscal 2024 major disaster-related deficit.

The Department of Revenue’s Division of Local Services has issued further clarifications about these changes in two municipal bulletins: BUL-2023-7 and BUL-2023-8.
Fiscal experts see uncertain budget outlook for FY25

By Jackie Lavender Bird

In light of state tax collections falling slightly below benchmarks for fiscal 2023 — a trend that’s continuing in the first part of fiscal 2024 — fiscal experts concur that the Commonwealth’s fiscal outlook is uncertain for the remainder of the year and for fiscal 2025.

During the annual consensus revenue hearing convened on Dec. 4 by the House and Senate Ways and Means committees and the governor’s budget office, the Department of Revenue and other fiscal experts and economists offered cautious outlooks for the economy and state revenues over the second half of fiscal 2024 and for fiscal 2025.

The Department of Revenue reported that year-to-date collections for the current fiscal year totaled approximately $14.1 billion, which is $146 million, or 1%, higher than collections in the same period of fiscal 2023, but $627 million, or 4.3%, below the year-to-date benchmark.

At the hearing, Department of Revenue Commissioner Geoffrey Snyder said he expects tax revenue growth in fiscal 2025 of between 1.7% and 3.2%. He added that his projection does not include revenue from the state’s so-called millionaires surtax, revenue from which is exceeding expectations. The fiscal 2024 state budget spends $1 billion in anticipated surtax revenue, but those collections are now expected to reach between $1.5 billion and $2 billion for the fiscal year.

The Department of Revenue estimates that fiscal 2025 surtax revenue will be between $1.7 billion and $2.1 billion. Revenue for the surtax — assessed on annual personal incomes above $1 million — must be used to fund public education and public transportation programs.

Additional outlooks for next year presented at the consensus revenue hearing were heavily qualified with discussions of uncertainty due to the ongoing emergency shelter crisis, global conflicts, inflationary pressures, and the fiscal impact of the recently enacted tax relief package, along with the positive outlook for surtax revenue.

The annual revenue hearing marks the start of the state budget season and is important for municipal officials because it provides insights into the direction of the economy and anticipated state revenues available to fund municipal and school aid programs next year, particularly Unrestricted General Government Aid.

Legislative leaders and the administration are expected to reach agreement on a tax revenue forecast for fiscal 2025 in the coming weeks. The forecast will be used in the governor’s budget recommendation, due to be filed by Jan. 24, as well as the House and Senate budget plans that are customarily released in April and May, respectively.

Priorities for 2nd year of session take shape for Legislature, MMA

By Dave Koffman

On Beacon Hill, last year kicked off with a new governor entering office, followed by significant agenda-setting by the administration as well as House and Senate leadership.

Legislative highlights in 2023 included a large re-capitalization through a general governmental bond bill, investments and remote meeting extensions through supplemental budgets, increases in local road funding (via a bond bill and the use of new state surtax revenue), a strong fiscal 2024 state budget with important increases in local aid, a comprehensive tax reform package, and recent municipal finance changes.

Priorities are now taking shape for 2024, with just under seven months until the end of formal sessions in the 193rd General Court.

As the Commonwealth moves further from the “crisis” mindset of the COVID pandemic, the economy continues to feel lasting inflationary pressures and a growing concern over the trajectory of state revenues, which continue to grow but at well-below-benchmark levels (and well below the rapid growth of fiscal 2021 and 2022). These fiscal pressures are particularly being felt in municipalities, which operate with tightly capped property tax revenues, despite growing costs and challenges. (Further complicating this will be the looming obligation deadline for funds provided by the federal government through the American Rescue Plan Act.)

Additionally, 2024 will continue to see legislative impacts from the growing needs under the state’s emergency shelter program. The recent closeout supplemental budget provided an important infusion of funding for the program, supporting many incurred costs at the state and local level. Ongoing and future financial implications of the program — especially with more modest state revenue growth — will be an important consideration for state budget conversations.

Amid these challenges, the Legislature is poised to tackle many priorities before the August recess. The next major development will be the fiscal 2025 state budget process. Gov. Maura Healey is expected to release her budget recommendation, known as House 2, in late January, with the Legislature planning to finalize a bill by the start of the fiscal year in July. The progress of state tax collections will be critical as the budget process unfolds in the House and Senate.

The MMA will continue to advocate for an adequate increase to Unrestricted General Government Aid to support key services for the state’s 351 cities and towns. Municipalities will continue to lean on predictable and adequate state revenue sharing to support essential municipal services and maintain local municipal services and maintain local public services.
DEI will be a theme of MMA Annual Meeting

By John Ouellette

The topic of diversity, equity and inclusion will be featured throughout the MMA Annual Meeting & Trade Show in January, from the opening keynote to the final workshop.

Eddie Glaude Jr., a New York Times bestselling author, Princeton University professor and political commentator whose work has helped people better understand the dynamics of race, democracy and religion in America, will be the keynote speaker during the Opening Session on Jan. 19.

An MSNBC commentator and author of several books, including “Begin Again: James Baldwin’s America and Its Urgent Lessons for Our Own,” Glaude engages Americans in an honest dialogue about the country’s racial past and present.

At the Annual Meeting, he will discuss how America’s promise of equality has rung hollow for Black Americans, even six decades after the civil rights movement. But the promise of equality still lives, he says, if people work together and create the conditions to think more carefully and systematically about the issues confronting America. The country needs a moral reckoning, he says, for a new America to emerge.

A DEI workshop, “Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion: The Significance for Municipalities,” will be repeated during each of the conference’s three workshop sessions.

Diversity, equity and inclusion is an emerging field in municipal spaces, and many cities and towns are at different stages in their journey, ranging from “where do we start” to implementing DEI into their policies, practices and organizational culture.

The Annual Meeting workshop will:

• Discuss how this important work impacts communities
• Explore core DEI foundations
• Recommend best practices based on a municipality’s level of need

The workshop will be led by Pittsfield Chief Diversity Officer Michael Obasohan and Sharon Select Board Chair Kiana Pierre-Louis, who is the assistant dean of Diversity, Equity and Inclusion at Northeastern University.

Racial Equity Group CEO Bird Guess, who’s working with the MMA to develop a strategic DEI plan for the organization, will also be available to meet members during the conference. He’ll be spending some time in the MMA’s Trade Show booth and will speak during the Annual Business Meeting of the Massachusetts Select Board Association.

Racial Equity Group worked with the MMA on its recent Municipal DEI Survey to identify the extent to which municipalities have emphasized DEI in municipal practices, policies and culture. Racial Equity Group will use the results to identify the resources and education needed to support municipal members engaged in this work, according to their level of need, and establish benchmarks for success.

The Racial Equity Group is also conducting a series of member focus groups, which will serve as another mechanism for gathering information about DEI work being conducted at the local level.

MBTA rapid transit communities adopt zoning changes for compliance

By Ali DiMatteo

All 12 of the state’s designated “rapid transit communities” under the MBTA communities law met their deadline to adopt local zoning changes that they will use to apply for compliance.

The 12 communities — Braintree, Brookline, Cambridge, Chelsea, Everett, Malden, Medford, Milton, Newton, Quincy, Revere and Somerville — had a deadline of Dec. 31, 2023, to adopt zoning changes to encourage the development of multifamily housing near transit stations.

Enacted as part of the 2020 economic development law, Section 3A of Chapter 40A (the Zoning Act) requires 177 MBTA communities to have at least one zoning district of reasonable size near a transit station in which multifamily housing is permitted as of right — and to meet other criteria set forth in the statute. Failure to comply would mean a loss of eligibility for funding from a number of the state’s funding programs, including MassWorks, the Local Capital Projects Fund and Community Planning Grants.

In an effort to increase flexibility, revisions were made to the law last August allowing for mixed-use development districts.

The Executive Office of Housing and Livable Communities has not yet certified the zoning plans of the first group of 12 communities, but officials expect to do so in the coming weeks. The law only requires zoning changes, not the construction of units, but a total of more than 83,000 homes could be created under the changes made in the 12 communities.

Communities identified as either “commuter rail” or “adjacent” — of which there are 130 — have a deadline of Dec. 31, 2024, to adopt zoning changes under the law. The remaining 35 MBTA communities, classified as “adjacent small towns,” have a deadline of Dec. 31, 2025.

More than a dozen of these remaining communities have already passed their zoning changes.
Local leaders from across Massachusetts will consider two resolutions during the MMA’s Annual Business Meeting on Jan. 20 in Boston — one on the state-local fiscal partnership and one on climate challenges.

MMA members will also hear from Lt. Gov. Kim Driscoll.

The proposed “Resolution Supporting an Enduring Fiscal Partnership Between Cities and Towns and the Commonwealth in Fiscal 2025 and Beyond” was drafted by the MMA Fiscal Policy Committee this fall, and the proposed “Resolution Supporting a Local-State-Federal Partnership to Address Climate Change, Enhance Resilience, and Bolster Adaptation Initiatives” was drafted by the Policy Committee on Energy and the Environment.

Both drafts were approved by the MMA Board of Directors on Nov. 14.

The fiscal resolution lays the groundwork for an effective revenue-sharing program, identifying municipal needs in areas such as unrestricted aid, education and charter school finance, capital needs such as road maintenance and municipal and school facilities, water and wastewater systems, climate resilience, broadband and cyber preparedness.

The climate resolution identifies the many impacts communities face as severe weather events become more frequent, and supports key actions to strengthen and expand existing resiliency programs, strengthen decarbonization efforts, and adapt to the changing climate.

The MMA published the resolutions online in late November and welcomed member comments by email through Dec. 29 in order to review any input before the Annual Business Meeting.

The MMA’s Annual Business Meeting is a key component of the MMA Annual Meeting & Trade Show, which is held each January in Boston. The policy discussions at the business meeting help to guide the advocacy work of the MMA in the year ahead.

Voting at the business meeting

Voting at the Annual Business Meeting is open to all municipal members of the MMA through voting delegates as defined by the MMA’s bylaws.

Individuals eligible to vote at the meeting are:

- In the case of a city, its chief executive or a councillor designated in writing by the chief executive, or
- In the case of a town, the chair of the select board or town council, or another select board member or councillor designated in writing by the chair, or the manager designated in writing by such chair.

In early January, the MMA will be sending a letter about voting procedures to chief municipal officials in each community.

Those who will be voting on behalf of their community should visit the credentials table outside of the business meeting between 9 and 10 a.m. Only one voting card will be issued per member community.

Proposed Resolution Supporting an Enduring Fiscal Partnership Between Cities and Towns and the Commonwealth in Fiscal 2025 and Beyond

Whereas, the well-being and success of the residents and businesses of the Commonwealth depends on the fiscal health of cities and towns and the ability of local government to provide efficient and progressive public services and adequately invest in reliable and resilient public infrastructure; and

Whereas, cities and towns are highly reliant on the tightly capped property tax to fund local budgets and capital programs, and this heavy reliance on the property tax severely limits the ability of cities and towns to respond to new challenges and opportunities, as well as adequately support necessary essential services for the public; and

Whereas, adequate and sustained state support for local public schools is essential for student success and the health of the Massachusetts economy; and

Whereas, the state’s charter school finance statute imposes significant financial and program challenges for public school districts, particularly in regions where there is a large concentration of charter schools; and

Whereas, state law limits the allowable growth in municipal revenues to a level that is far below the region’s rate of inflation, exacerbated by significant non-discretionary cost drivers, which continue to grow at an unprecedented magnitude during the Proposition 2½ era; and

Whereas, to avoid becoming overly reliant on the property tax and to ensure that municipalities have the fiscal capacity to deliver the high-quality municipal and school services that are essential to support local economies and families in every corner of the Commonwealth, it is imperative that cities and towns receive an adequate share of state revenues, have an effective and fair municipal tax system, have the tools necessary to plan for and fund long-term liabilities, have state support for investments in the municipal workforce and capital investments, and receive full funding for any new or existing state mandates;

Therefore, it is hereby resolved that the members of the Massachusetts Municipal Association support the following essential policy positions to ensure a strong partnership between cities and towns and the Commonwealth in fiscal 2025 and beyond:

In the Area of Municipal and School Aid

- In fiscal 2025, unrestricted municipal aid should grow by at least the same rate as the growth in state tax collections, and be distributed without earmarks, conditions, or restrictions to all cities and towns, so that local officials and residents can adequately fund public safety, public works, and all basic municipal and school services while avoiding an overreliance on the property tax;

- All State Lottery proceeds, and the revenue from expanded gaming that is statutorily dedicated to pay for municipal services, should be used to support the Commonwealth’s commitment to unrestricted municipal aid;

- Chapter 70 school aid should be increased in fiscal 2025 consistent with the Commonwealth’s constitutional obligation to ensure adequate funding in all schools, at a minimum following the updated spending standard and original phase-in schedule adopted in the 2019 Student Opportunity Act, with each city, town, and school district receiving a minimum increase of $100 per student;

RESOLUTIONS continued on 7
In the Area of Capital Budgeting

- The Governor and the Legislature should work together early in 2024 to ensure enactment of a multi-year transportation bond bill that provides at least $350 million annually for Chapter 90 local road projects, indexed to grow to match construction inflation, with a notice of allocations for fiscal 2025 by March 1, 2024, with separate authorizations for the Municipal Pavement Program, Municipal Small Bridge Program, Complete Streets Program, as well as municipal grants for infrastructure focused on the enhancement of mass transit, funding that increases access to mass transit and commuter rail stations, grants to municipalities and regional transit authorities to support fleet electrification, and a supplemental municipal road formula program to for rural communities;

- The Governor and the Legislature should strengthen the Massachusetts School Building Authority and Massachusetts Board of Library Commissioners grants by adjusting reimbursements to reflect the actual costs of construction;

- The state’s fiscal 2025 capital plan should include funding for MassWorks, HousingWorks, and all grant programs through the Community One Stop for Growth, to help pay for important local infrastructure projects, including housing, economic development, and road safety programs;

- The state’s fiscal 2025 capital plan should include additional funding, not limited to loans, for water infrastructure projects, including basic drinking water capital and water contamination mitigation (PFAS), wastewater capital and Combined Sewer Overflow mitigation, and stormwater management;

- The Governor and the Legislature should support programs in the fiscal 2025 state budget and capital plan to help cities and towns assess and respond to challenges related to climate change, including the Municipal Vulnerability Preparedness program, Coastal Resilience Grant Program, Green Communities Program, Green School Works and others;

- The Governor and the Legislature should continue to make the installation of high-speed internet access in unserved and under-served cities and towns a high priority;

- The Governor and the Legislature should deploy remaining federal American Rescue Plan Act funding and future state bonding authorizations for water, sewer, environmental, broadband, and housing infrastructure so that communities can leverage these funds to address critical local needs;

- The Governor and the Legislature should work with cities and towns to identify the scope of investment needed to ensure that municipal information technology systems are modernized and resilient from cyberattacks, and enact a state funding mechanism and program to provide the resources needed to implement these investments across the state;

- The Governor and the Legislature should work with cities and towns to identify the scope of investment needed to ensure that municipal buildings critical to the delivery of essential public services are safe and modern, and enact a state funding mechanism and program to provide the resources needed to implement these improvements across the state; and

In the Area of Local Taxing Authority and Other Revenues

- Cities and towns should be granted new local-option flexibility to adopt local taxes and other revenues to help pay for municipal and school services and the construction and maintenance of local capital projects;

- Cities and towns should be granted increased local-option flexibility to implement targeted property tax relief programs including for seniors and low-income homeowners, and to adjust the relative property tax burden for residential and commercial and industrial properties; and

In the Area of Long-Term Liabilities and Sustainability

- In order to allow cities and towns to manage current costs and ensure fiscal sustainability over the long term, the Legislature, the Governor, and state agencies should determine, report and review the actuarial liability of post-employment benefits for public employees and undertake a comprehensive reform of the laws and practices related to post-employment benefits for public employees, with an immediate focus on Other Post-Employment Benefit (OPEB) liabilities related to health insurance for retired public employees. Reform should include ways to manage liabilities and finance benefits, and should not impose any new unfunded mandates or preempt any existing decision-making authority that cities and towns currently use to manage their OPEB liability;

- The Governor and the Legislature should determine and report the long-term cost to cities and towns as part of the evaluation of all legislative proposals to amend public employee benefit programs, and no legislation to expand benefits should be acted upon until this cost analysis is complete and made public; and

In the Area of Timely Notice of Local Aid for Good Planning and Implementation

- To ensure orderly and efficient financial planning at the local level and implementation of balanced and adequate local operating and capital budgets, the Governor and the Legislature should reach early agreement on unrestricted municipal aid and Chapter 70 school aid and local contribution amounts so that a consensus local aid resolution can be approved and reliable Cherry Sheets can be released by March 1; and

It is further resolved that a copy of these resolutions shall be provided to the Governor and Members of the Massachusetts General Court. ●
Administration seeks solutions, funding for shelters

By Ali DiMatteo

The Healey-Driscoll administration continues to look for additional funding to address the state’s growing emergency shelter needs.

Despite an additional $250 million for emergency shelters included in the recently signed fiscal 2023 supplemental budget, the administration is projecting a shortfall of $224 million for the current fiscal year, while projecting that an additional $915 million, over current spending levels, will be needed in fiscal 2025 to meet the system’s demands.

In biweekly reports to the Legislature, the first of which was issued on Dec. 18, Administration and Finance Secretary Matthew Gorzkowitz and Housing and Livable Communities Secretary Ed Augustus share data about those in the system, while making the case for future needs.

As of Jan. 3, the Emergency Assistance Placement dashboard showed that there were 7,511 families enrolled in the system. According to the administration’s Jan. 1 report to the Legislature, 3,525 of the families entered as migrants, refugees or asylum seekers, and 391 families were awaiting placement. Families were placed in temporary shelters in 100 Massachusetts cities and towns.

Because most families live in a shelter for more than one year, the state is looking to take a two-year approach.

“That means that even with the system’s capacity level established, deficiency needs for [Emergency Assistance] are a two fiscal year problem, requiring a solution that spans FY24 and FY25” the Dec. 18 report states.

The report proposes using the state’s transitional escrow account to fund the deficiency. The account was created in 2021 with $1.5 billion in surplus revenue and now has a balance of approximately $700 million.

The report indicates that the administration plans to file a supplemental budget to move the account’s remaining balance into an Emergency Housing and Community Trust Fund. The administration proposes spending the money on the following priorities:

- Up to $150 million to support housing production and preservation
- Funding 2024 shelter operational and related costs and continuing 2025 shelter costs
- Additional housing production and preservation
- The report estimates there will be a shortfall of approximately $260 million in fiscal 2025 after the account is depleted, but proposes flexibility to address costs in case circumstances change, such as additional federal supports, work authorizations or increasing exits.

The report also outlines a need for $148 million for shelter support services, such as case management, health services, child care and workforce readiness; $67 million to support school districts and unhoused K-12 students, including special education services and English learner supports; and $10 million for specialized immigration and refugee health and community supports.

The state has seen a steep increase in migration in the past year, with the number of families in the system growing by more than 60% since Gov. Maura Healey took office last January. One hundred communities across the state are now hosting families in shelters, hotels and other temporary placements.

Special legislative panel to consider Civil Service reform proposal

By Dave Koffman

A Special Legislative Commission to Study and Examine the Civil Service Law reconvened on Dec. 12 to hear an initial reform proposal from its co-chairs and staff at the Civil Service Commission.

The Civil Service presentation focused on a proposed new “hybrid” pathway, which civil service departments could use to identify applicants for municipal police and fire positions outside of the existing entry-level process through the state’s Human Resources Division.

The hybrid pathway would allow civil service cities and towns to opt-in through a multi-year memorandum of understanding with the HRD. The MOU would include “anti-nepotism and anti-favoritism” language.

The hybrid pathway would allow for the following:

- Cities and towns could make up to 50% of entry-level police and fire appointments outside of the traditional civil service exam process, drawing from a locally generated pool of prospective candidates.
- Cities and towns could consider prospective “hybrid” candidates immediately, regardless of whether they have taken a civil service examination and without the need for a certification from the HRD.
- Prospective candidates would go through the same, pre-existing review process, including a pre-conditional offer background check and post-conditional offer medical and physical abilities tests.

- Once all conditions are met, the HRD would authorize a candidate’s employment in the same manner as traditional civil service candidates, subject to completion of a prescribed course of study at an approved police or fire academy, if not already completed.

- Civil service communities could appoint incumbent police officers from non-civil service communities through this process for entry-level positions only, but those candidates would be considered original appointments, and would not retain any seniority.

The special legislative commission, which is scheduled to meet again on Jan. 10, was established by Chapter 253 of the Acts of 2020, known as the Governor signs economic development plan

By John Ouellette

Gov. Maura Healey on Dec. 12 signed the administration’s first economic development plan, which aligns its economic development priorities, funding and legislative initiatives within three main areas of focus: investing in the fundamentals to enable economic growth; retaining and attracting talent; and supporting businesses.

The plan will likely provide a foundation for an economic development bill expected to be filed by the governor early in 2024.

At an unveiling event on Dec. 6, Gov. Maura Healey said the plan — Team Massachusetts: Leading Future Generations — outlines a strategy to “put us on a path to future success by powering short- and long-term economic growth, retaining and attracting the world’s best talent, and supporting our businesses,” particularly in sectors like climate technology, life sciences and advanced manufacturing.

Lt. Gov. Kim Driscoll said the plan prioritizes affordability for residents and growing the economy in every region. Economic Development Secretary Yvonne Hao said the administration aspires to ensure that “our state is the best place for people to start and grow their careers and for companies to start and scale, all while being a great place to live.”

The plan prioritizes supporting three areas of focus with specific initiatives:

Fundamentals: Addressing housing and transportation challenges, and investing in infrastructure and competitiveness, including a focus on rural communities by creating a rural designation

Talent: Launching programs to retain and attract talent, including college graduates, immigrants, non-college graduates, and trades/professions

Sectors: Streamlining access to state resources for businesses, advancing leadership in life sciences, health care, advanced manufacturing, robotics and artificial intelligence, and catalyzing new leadership in climate technology as well as tourism and culture.

Healey said more than 1,300 stakeholders, industry leaders, elected officials, and members of the public participated in the plan’s creation. To inform the process, the administration and the Executive Office of Economic Development formed an Economic Development Planning Council in May comprising public and private sector leaders and representatives of key industries, and held regional engagement sessions across Massachusetts. Discussions addressed five areas: business climate, community and neighborhood development, key clusters and innovation, workforce and talent, and equity and opportunity.

A public hearing on the economic development plan before the Legislature is required by statute, and Hao testified on the plan before the Legislature’s Joint Committee on Economic Development and Emerging Technologies at the State House on Dec. 6.

“The majority of our economy is aligned around industries that are growing,” she told the committee. “Health care is growing, life sciences is growing, climate tech is growing, advanced manufacturing is growing. AI is growing, robotics are growing. So we have a ton of tailwinds in growth sectors, and so we just need to make sure that we continue to lengthen our lead and continue to invest and continue to implement all of these initiatives here.”

State law requires the creation of a new economic development plan, and approval by the governor, within the first year of a new administration or term.

The Economic Development Planning Council will organize an annual economic development summit to discuss updates to the plan, progress on initiatives, and concerns.

$100M road, bridge supplemental funding available to municipalities

By Adrienne Núñez

On Dec. 15, the administration announced that $100 million for municipal roads and bridges approved in the fiscal 2024 state budget is now available to cities and towns.

The allocation is funded through a voter-approved surtax on annual incomes above $1 million, which must be spent on transportation and education programs.

Program funding has been added to municipal Chapter 90 accounts and may be used for projects that are eligible under Chapter 90, including construction, preservation, and improvement of municipal roads and bridges. The apportionment is automatically incorporated into each municipality’s existing Chapter 90 contract with the Massachusetts Department of Transportation, with no further action required by the municipality.

MassDOT has sent letters to each municipality certifying its apportionment for the current fiscal year. Allocations are distributed based on two formulas: $50 million is distributed based on the existing Chapter 90 program formula, which takes into account population, road miles and employment; and $50 million is distributed based on road miles alone.

Apportionments for each community are listed on the MassDOT website.

The $100 million in supplemental funding comes in addition to $200 million for the Chapter 90 program and a new $25 million rural roads program approved for fiscal 2024. Details about disbursements for the rural roads program are still being determined.
FY23 closeout budget signed into law

By Jackie Lavender Bird

The House and Senate on Dec. 4 enacted a closeout fiscal 2023 supplemental budget that was quickly signed into law by Gov. Maura Healey.

The compromise bill had been released on Nov. 30 by a legislative conference committee that was tasked with ironing out differences between versions passed by the House and Senate last month.

The legislation includes $250 million to address the emergency shelter crisis, with $50 million set aside for an overflow shelter site and $75 million targeted for school funding relief related to the shelter crisis. The law requires the administration to report on its spending of the shelter funds every two weeks.

In addition to the shelter crisis funding, the law includes $75 million to address extraordinary cost increases for special education in eligible school districts, in response to a decision made last October by the Operational Services Division allowing out-of-district special education private schools to increase tuition by 14% in fiscal 2024.

The law also includes a section to address costs associated with administering early voting and mail-in voting, providing $5 million for grants from a reserve account to be issued by the secretary of state. The law also schedules the state’s 2024 primary election on Sept. 3.

The law includes $15 million for disaster relief for municipalities affected by storms and natural disasters in 2023. It also authorizes municipalities to amortize, over fiscal 2025 through 2027, costs incurred as a result of recent natural disasters, an important mechanism for impacted communities.

The law includes several of the municipal finance changes that were included in a supplemental budget bill filed by the governor in March, a top priority of the MMA. Of note, the bill would provide important clarity on the process for spending and accounting for opioid settlement funds.

The bulk of the spending in the bill, $2.12 billion, is for MassHealth fee-for-service payments.

MMA, Suffolk University launch Municipal Human Resources Seminar

By Kate Evarts

The MMA and Suffolk University are announcing an expansion of their professional development partnership with the launch of a new Municipal Human Resources Seminar that will begin in April.

The Municipal Human Resources Seminar will review human resources management, policies and practices specific to Massachusetts cities and towns. Key topics will include hiring and onboarding, benefits administration, policy development, collective bargaining, and employee reviews and evaluations. Students will also review relevant labor laws and best practices in municipal human resources management.

The seminar is designed for municipal employees interested in furthering their career in municipal human resources, employees who are new to municipal human resources, and employees who work in a municipal function with human-resources-adjacent tasks.

“On behalf of the MMHR Board, we are very excited about the launch of the new Human Resources Seminar,” said North Andover Deputy Town Manager Denise Casey, an MMHR past president and long-time board member. “This program will provide municipal leaders with practical, hands-on experience from practitioners in the field.”

The MMA has partnered with Suffolk University since 2011 to offer continuing education programs designed exclusively for municipal employees to further their careers in local government. More than 500 local officials have graduated from the MMA-Suffolk Certificate in Local Government Leadership and Management program, and more than 300 municipal staff have completed the MMA-Suffolk Municipal Finance Management Seminar since it began in 2019.

“We are thrilled that our trusted partners at Suffolk University are partnering with us on another program for our members,” said MMA Deputy Executive Director Katie McCue. “This program will add so much value and skill-building for municipal human resources professionals.”

The Municipal Human Resources Seminar will be held via Zoom over the course of five Thursdays, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Dates for the inaugural seminar are April 4, April 18, April 25, May 2, and May 16. The cost of the seminar is $875.

The application for the 2024 seminar is available online as a fillable PDF. Applications are due by Feb. 15 to seminars@mma.org. This is a competitive application process; applicants will be informed of their status by early March.
MMA webinar reviews new cannabis regulations

By Lily Rancatore

An MMA webinar on Dec. 11 with attorney Nicole Costanzo of KP Law discussed the Cannabis Control Commission’s recently promulgated regulations and their impact on host communities.

Costanzo began by reviewing how host community agreements — both new and pre-existing ones — will be affected by the new regulations when they take effect on March 1, 2024. In the spring, the CCC will review host community agreements, or HCAs, to determine compliance with the new regulatory requirements and social equity mandates.

Under the new regulations, HCAs must satisfy certain “minimum acceptable requirements.” For instance, no host community may impose an unreasonable condition or a term that is “unreasonably impracticable” in an HCA. HCAs must also include a statement of all stipulated responsibilities between a host community and a marijuana establishment.

Regarding a host community’s assessment of community impact fees, HCAs must include “clear, specific terms,” such as the certified business name of the licensee, the specific type of marijuana operations permitted, and the duration of the HCA. Several terms, conditions and clauses are now prohibited in an HCA, including provisions that require upfront payments or impose legal, overtime, administrative, or any costs other than a community impact fee.

“No host community may rely on other written instruments, contracts, or agreements to impose terms or conditions on a license applicant, marijuana establishment, or medical marijuana treatment center outside of an HCA,” Costanzo said. “A contractual financial obligation, other than a [community impact fee], that is explicitly or implicitly a factor considered in or included as a condition of an HCA is unenforceable.”

The recent regulations allow host communities to discontinue relations, although marijuana establishments may submit a request for equitable relief to the CCC. If the CCC grants or denies equitable relief to a marijuana establishment, it will provide notice of its decision to a marijuana establishment and a host community.

Costanzo concluded by reviewing the mandatory practices to promote and encourage full equity participation. Host communities must publicize certain information in conspicuous locations, explain the reasoning for the approval or denial of an application, and develop an equity plan to promote and encourage full participation.

MMA Legislative Analyst Ali DiMatteo moderated 25 minutes of questions and answers, which addressed inquiries about cannabis cafes, retail operation limits, charitable funding provisions, and amending bylaws to limit licenses.

MMA webinar discusses flag flying practices and policies

By Lily Rancatore

An MMA webinar on Jan. 3 reviewed recommended policies and best practices for handling requests from third parties to fly flags on municipal property.

Attorney Mark Reich of KP Law began by making the important distinction between government speech and private speech in a public forum. Government speech is controlled by the government itself, and does not include the expression of opinions by members of the public.

In a May 2022 decision in Shurtleff v. City of Boston, concerning the city’s refusal to raise a “Christian flag” outside of City Hall, the U.S. Supreme Court focused on the question of whether raising the flag was an act of government speech or private expression.

Reich said the key takeaway from Shurtleff is the importance of giving thoughtful consideration to any formal policies or informal practices allowing nongovernmental entities to fly flags on public flagpoles, and documenting them. Once a forum — such as a flagpole — becomes open to the public, he said, the extent to which a municipality can restrict requests relies upon an implemented policy.

Municipalities may implement policies that specify some degree of control over flagpoles as public forums. Without a policy, municipalities could be forced to allow flags to fly that do not align with the community’s beliefs. It’s problematic to deny flag requests without a policy in place, as the municipality could unintentionally engage in content-based discrimination that violates the First Amendment, Reich said.

He said it may be particularly important for municipalities to consider adopting a policy if they have allowed individual expression flags in the past, given that such requests could increase.

Reich described the differences between a basic and detailed policy, encouraging attendees to consult their town counsel as they consider written guidelines.

A basic flag flying policy could solely list what flags are to be flown (e.g., federal, Commonwealth, municipal, POW/MIA, or flags representing armed services) and include a statement about municipal flagpoles being limited to government speech. A more detailed policy would also indicate which additional types of flags may be flown, as determined by the municipality.

If a municipality has more than one flagpole, it may consider designating one of them as a public forum. Reich recommended posting a sign at these poles, indicating that the ideas and opinions represented are public speech and not necessarily the views of the municipality itself.

MMA Legislative Director Dave Koffman moderated 35 minutes of questions and answers, which addressed inquiries about the timing of policy implementation, public displays on banners and bulletin boards, flying the POW/MIA flag, and flagpoles on public school property.

MMA hosts 2nd annual POST webinar

By Lily Rancatore

An MMA webinar on Dec. 12 reviewed the responsibilities of the Peace Officer Standards and Training Commission, the latest agency milestones, and common themes of policing reforms.

POST Communications Director Cindy Campbell reviewed the commission’s mandate to certify officers and law enforcement agencies across the Commonwealth. The primary responsibility of the POST Commission is to develop certification standards for officers and agencies in partnership with the Municipal Police Training Committee.

Campbell discussed certification updates, including the recent certification of School Resource Officers. POST collaborated with MPTC in the formulation and deployment of the school resource officers application and certification, she said. School resource officers are required to complete annual training provided by the MPTC.

POST began certifying SROs in October of this year, Campbell said. To date, 427 individuals have completed the required training and obtained an SRO certification.

POST deployed a new agency portal this past May. Certification information is entered in the portal, as well as information about officers who need to be recertified. Soon, the new platform will have functionality for submitting complaints and other reports due to POST.

POST Commission Executive Director Enrique Zuniga outlined certification requirements and information that must be submitted to POST when making appeals or seeking recertifications.

Officers must complete necessary work requirements, in-service training, CPR or First Aid certificates, and education before being granted full certification. If an officer does not meet the certification requirements within the specified timeframe, the Division of Certification may decline to grant certification. Following such a decision, officers may submit a written petition to the commission requesting a review within 21 days.

Zuniga discussed future certification policy matters, including the upcoming recertification process for officers with last names beginning with A through H, which will begin in July 2024.

Physical and psychological fitness will also be ascertained by the commission going forward; officers will receive fitness evaluations as an ongoing state requirement.

Regarding the disciplinary process for noncompliant officers, Zuniga said the commission will investigate complaints submitted by police personnel or by the public using an online form. Complaints that allege bias, excessive force or a lack of professionalism, among other issues, fall under the commission’s jurisdiction, she said. Law enforcement agencies can submit disciplinary records and certification documents to POST within 90 days of an incident.

POST published historical disciplinary records earlier in 2023, and has subsequently issued updates. These records include sustained complaints and data on officers who have resigned or retired to avoid discipline. This information is updated regularly via the commission’s database.

MMA Legislative Director Dave Koffman moderated 15 minutes of questions and answers, which addressed inquiries about the Massachusetts Police Accreditation Commission, the difference between “certification” and “accreditation,” revocation proceedings, and sustained complaints regarding retention of disciplinary records.

Going to MMA’s Annual Meeting? There’s an app for that

By Meredith Gabrilska

Attendees of the MMA Annual Meeting & Trade Show this month can use the event’s free mobile app to make the most of their conference experience.

Now in its sixth iteration, this year’s app will be provided by a new vendor and is expected to provide a better user experience.

The app, available for all smartphones and tablet devices, is the primary resource for planning and navigating the Annual Meeting. Users will find schedule details, workshop listings, speaker profiles, exhibitor information, an interactive map of the Trade Show floor, and much more.

Attendees can use the app to personalize their meeting schedule, network with other attendees, and receive up-to-the-minute updates and alerts.

A guide to accessing the app will be emailed to Annual Meeting registrants in the next week or so. The app features a login process that ensures that only Annual Meeting attendees are using it.

Advance registration for Annual Meeting is advised, so attendees have time to explore the app and take advantage of its many features.

Assistance will be available at the Annual Meeting to answer questions and help on-site registrants.
New MSA Handbook to be unveiled at Business Meeting

By Anneke Craig

The Massachusetts Select Board Association will unveil the new edition of the Handbook for Massachusetts Select Board Members during its Annual Business Meeting on Jan. 20 in Boston.

The 2024 edition of the handbook will be published online on www.mma.org in January and will include extensive content updates to reflect changes to laws, regulations and policies, as well as emerging best practices. The new edition features new chapters on climate change, and diversity, equity and inclusion.

The new format — a microsite within the MMA website — will allow users to easily navigate and search the content, while allowing for content updates to be made as needed on a rolling basis.

Three members of the MSA Handbook Committee — Williamstown Select Board Member and MSA President Andy Hogeland, former Norwell Select Board Member Alison Demong, and former Natick Select Board Member Joshua Ostroff (now the director of transportation planning in Newton) — will demonstrate the new handbook and answer questions.

The MSA handbook, which goes back many decades, was last updated in 2014. Following the handbook demonstration, Bird Guess, the CEO of Racial Equity Group, will discuss DEI opportunities for select boards.

Guess has been working with the MSA’s DEI Committee since September to develop a strategic plan for the advancement of municipal DEI efforts. His presentation will include a discussion of best practices for select boards to gauge their municipality’s needs and to initiate DEI work.

The MSA business meeting will include a report from the MSA Nominating Committee and a subsequent vote on officers and a District 5 representative for the 2024 MSA Board of Directors.

The MSA Annual Business Meeting will be held from 8:15 to 9:15 a.m. on Saturday, Jan. 20, during the MMA Annual Meeting & Trade Show at the Hynes Convention Center in Boston.

All select board members in Massachusetts are considered members of the MSA and are invited to attend the MSA Annual Business Meeting, provided they are registered for the MMA Annual Meeting. Attendance at the MSA Annual Business Meeting is limited to MSA members.

Utilities submit drafts of electric sector modernization plans

By Adrienne Núñez and Josie Ahlberg

The state’s investor-owned electric distribution companies — Eversource, National Grid and Unitil — have submitted drafts of their electric sector modernization plans.

These comprehensive plans are meant to ensure that the state’s electric infrastructure is able to handle increased demand due to further electrification of vehicles, heating systems, and other technologies.

The plans include an overview of all approved, reviewed, or under consideration distribution system investments and alternatives; distribution system improvements to increase system reliability and resiliency in the face of weather- and disaster-related risks; distribution system improvements to facilitate transportation and building electrification; forecasts considering five- and 10-year horizons; and an assessment of demand through 2050.

Eversource’s draft electric sector modernization plan identifies a need to construct 14 new substations and upgrade 28 new substations over the 10-year period, with upgrades to 10 existing substations and construction of three new substations in the first five years.

Unitil’s draft plan calls for upgrades to its Lunenburg substation and a new South Lunenburg substation, which would introduce a second supply system in its service area.

The ESMPs were submitted on Nov. 3 to the Grid Modernization Advisory Council, which is charged with reviewing and providing recommendations on the plans.

Electricity distributors received input from the general public and key stakeholders through two stakeholder focus groups, public comment by email, and advisory council meetings. Comments on the drafts were accepted through Dec. 10.

The MMA participated in the utility-led stakeholder sessions and submitted written comments.

The distribution companies are now revising their plans based on input.
MMA Trade Show to highlight municipal solutions

By Karen LaPointe

Trade Show exhibitors are looking forward to meeting local officials during the 45th MMA Annual Meeting & Trade Show at the Hynes Convention Center in Boston in January.

The MMA’s annual Trade Show will feature 220-plus exhibitors — including more than 30 first-timers — offering the latest products and services for the cities and towns of Massachusetts. The Trade Show offers opportunities to connect with companies, associations and government agencies in a lively exhibit hall.

Visit the MMA Annual Meeting & Trade Show website for the complete, updated list of exhibitors for 2024.

The Trade Show will be open on Friday, Jan. 19, from 11:15 a.m. to 5 p.m., and on Saturday, Jan. 20, from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

Trade Show to feature 6 Learning Lab workshops

By Karen LaPointe

One highlight of the MMA’s annual Trade Show at the Hynes Convention Center in Boston is the series of educational Learning Labs, which will be held in the exhibit hall on Friday, Jan. 19. These 30-minute sessions provide opportunities to hear from experts on a variety of topics.

The following are the six Learning Labs for 2024:

11:30 a.m.-Noon

• Sustainability Advisory Services for Municipalities — Presented by Constellation

12:10-12:40 p.m.

• The 5 Keys to Creating Strategic Plans That Work — Presented by ClearGov

• Working with Your Local Cultural Council — Presented by Mass Cultural Council

• Internet for All in Your Community — Presented by Massachusetts Broadband Institute

12:50-1:20 p.m.

• Managing Pension and OPEB Costs: The Dual Nature of Section 115 Trusts — Presented by Public Agency Retirement Services

• How to Navigate Animal Issues in your City or Town — Presented by MSPCA – Angell

Visit the MMA Annual Meeting & Trade Show website for complete information about the Learning Labs.

Administration announces $25M for dam removal

At an event in Pittsfield on Dec. 1, the Healey-Driscoll administration announced an investment of $25 million to remove eight aging dams in central and western Massachusetts, including the abandoned, high-hazard Bel Air Dam in Pittsfield.

The administration said the removal of hazardous and aging dams will restore fish and other wildlife habitat, increase biodiversity, improve water quality, promote climate resiliency, and make communities safer.

“This summer, we saw firsthand the catastrophic impacts of severe flooding and the stress and pressure it puts on our dams,” Gov. Maura Healey said in a prepared statement. “This is a life-saving investment that will protect our residents’ and communities’ safety and security.”

Communities face significant financial burdens in removing or repairing dams, and the funding will ease the strain on local budgets. Lt. Gov. Kim Driscoll said the funding helps cities and towns “proactively prepare for future weather events.”

The projects are funded through the American Rescue Plan Act. Of the $25 million, $20 million will support the removal of Bel Air Dam, and $5 million will go toward the removal of the following seven dams in areas managed by the Division of Fisheries and Wildlife: Thousand Acre Reservoir Dam in Athol, Cusky Pond Dam in New Braintree, Salmon Pond Dam in Brookfield, Patrill Hollow Pond Dam in Hardwick, Schoolhouse Pond Dam and Arnold Pond Dam in Sutton, and Weston Brook Dam in Windsor.

Joining Pittsfield Mayor Linda Tyer for the announcement were Energy and Environmental Affairs Secretary Rebecca Tepper, Department of Conservation and Recreation Commissioner Brian Arrigo, Department of Fish and Game Commissioner Tom O’Shea and Office of Dam Safety Director Bill Salomaa.

The Office of Dam Safety maintains records of dams statewide and ensures compliance with regulations pertaining to dam inspections, maintenance, operation, and repairs. Dam owners are responsible for registering their dams, notifying ODS of a property transfer, and inspecting and maintaining dams in safe operating condition. In the case of high- and significant-hazard potential dams, owners are also required to develop an emergency action plan to be used if there is an incident of failure, overtopping, or damage to a dam.

The Division of Ecological Restoration makes grant and loan funding available for dam repairs, breaching, or removal under the Dam and Seawall Repair or Removal Program and the DER Priority Projects Program.

First-time Annual Meeting attendees get special welcome

The MMA will hold a special orientation session for first-time attendees of its Annual Meeting & Trade Show on Friday, Jan. 19, from 8 to 9 a.m.

The session will provide an informal opportunity to learn from MMA members about the best strategies for making the most of the Annual Meeting experience.

Select board members, city and town councillors, town managers and human resources professionals will be on hand, along with MMA staff, to welcome attendees and answer questions. First-time attendees can also get answers to questions about the MMA’s Annual Meeting app.

If you are planning to attend the MMA Annual Meeting for the first time, or have any questions about the event or the first-time attendee session, contact MMA Senior Member Program Coordinator Denise Baker at dbaker@mma.org or 617-426-7272, ext. 105.

MMA to host webinar on performance appraisals and goal setting

A free MMA webinar on Jan. 9 will review the objectives of a performance appraisal system and offer practical tips for setting “SMART” goals to start the year off right.

Joellen Cademartori, CEO of GovHR, will share strategies for reviewing and completing appraisal forms and setting measurable goals that can be used to quantify progress. She will also discuss how appointed and elected officials alike can prepare for performance appraisals.

SMART goals are specific, measurable, achievable, relevant and time-based.

The hour-long webinar will begin at noon. Online registration is available.

For more information, contact MMA Education and Training Coordinator Lily Rancatore at lrancatore@mma.org.
Annual Meeting to feature interview skills session

During the MMA Annual Meeting & Trade Show, the MMA will offer a special session on Saturday, Jan. 20, titled “Polishing Your Interview Skills.”

A panel of executive recruiters will offer tips to improve your interview skills. Panelists will include:

- Mary Aicardi, human resources practice leader at the Collins Center for Public Management at UMass Boston
- Joellen Cademartori, CEO of GovHR USA
- Bernard Lynch, managing principal of Community Paradigm Associates
- Weston Town Manager Leon Gaumond

A mock interview will highlight the do’s and don’ts of interviewing, and attendees will have the opportunity to ask questions.

The session will be held from 8:15 to 9:15 a.m. All Annual Meeting attendees are welcome.

Contact: MMA Senior Member Program Coordinator Denise Baker at dbaker@mma.org

MMA booth is opportunity to discuss policy issues

Local officials will be able to talk about the important issues facing cities and towns with MMA staff and representatives from MMA member groups at the MMA’s Trade Show booth during the Annual Meeting & Trade Show on Jan. 19 and 20.

MMA Legislative Division staff will be available to discuss a variety of policy issues, as well as the MMA’s policy committees, the business meeting resolutions, legislation for the coming year, and other priorities.

The MMA booth will also have information about MMA programs and events, such as the spring Legislative Breakfast Meetings, and member group information.

Details about the 2024-2025 MMA-Suffolk University Certificate in Local Government Leadership and Management Program and the MMA-Suffolk Municipal Finance Management Seminar will be available, along with information about the new Municipal Human Resources program.

Consult the MMA Annual Meeting website or mobile app for the full MMA Trade Show booth schedule.

Applications due Jan. 11 for school bus fleet electrification grants

By Adrienne Núñez

The Accelerating Clean Transportation School Bus program is accepting applications through Jan. 11 for the 2023 School Bus Fleet Deployment program.

Administered by the Massachusetts Clean Energy Center, the grant program offers up to $2.5 million in flexible funding for school bus depot upgrades and the purchase of electric school buses and charging infrastructure.

The MassCEC request for proposals seeks applications from any of the following:

- Massachusetts public school districts as sole applicants
- Public school districts partnered with a private school bus transportation contract
- Private school bus transportation contractors partnered with Massachusetts public school districts under the Fleet Deployment Program

Participating fleets will also have the opportunity to work with the MassCEC’s consultant team to address gaps in technical knowledge related to school bus fleet electrification, including coordination with stakeholders, equipment selection, procurement and project implementation.

An informational webinar is available online, and questions may be sent to CleanTransportation@MassCEC.com.

In addition to the Fleet Deployment program, Accelerating Clean Transportation, or ACT, also offers advisory services, for which applications are accepted on a rolling basis.

The application period for the 2023 School Bus Fleet Deployment program is open through Jan. 11.
Climate change drives municipal planning challenges

By Jennifer Ranz

With changing weather patterns creating a growing challenge for communities, multiple sessions during this year’s MMA Annual Meeting will focus on the impacts of climate change, as well as what municipalities can do to maintain buildings and prevent costly damages.

Experts will cover climate science, building resiliency, and risk mitigation — underscoring the critical importance of these issues as municipalities plan for 2024 and beyond.

Saturday keynote Gina McCarthy, who served as the nation’s first national climate advisor, will highlight strategies to drive public engagement by focusing on added opportunities such as job creation and improving health outcomes.

During a MIIA-led workshop, Megan Hart, managing director of Aon’s Catastrophe Risk Analytics Group, will cover the science behind changing weather patterns, and participate in a panel discussion on what municipal leaders can do to mitigate property losses and financial impact.

Massachusetts’ first-ever climate chief, Melissa Hoffer, will speak about her wide-ranging experience working in public service during the Women Elected Municipal Leadership Luncheon.

Statewide focus on climate

Last October, the Healey administration released its ResilientMass Plan, which identified the most significant climate risks the Commonwealth is facing, and what actions are being taken to address them.

The plan cited extreme weather patterns, including inland flooding, high heat, coastal flooding and erosion, and wildfires, as the highest risks to prioritize for statewide action. Severe weather events caused tens of millions of dollars in damage to homes, businesses and crops statewide during 2023 — and infrastructure such as transit service, utilities and coastal ports are also at risk.

Stephen Batchelder, vice president of Claims Operations and Risk Management at MIIA, said changing weather patterns continue to have a direct impact on municipal property damage — and associated insurance claims — across the Commonwealth.

“We are seeing more claims for water losses than ever before, whether from roof leaks, weather-related flooding, or from extreme temperature changes causing pipe freeze-ups,” he said. “These water losses are critical to prevent, as they can lead to costly secondary damage including mold.”

While many think of floods as a coastal problem, incidences of costly inland flooding are now much more common. This spike in extreme weather conditions, coupled with the rising cost of catastrophe reinsurance, could have an adverse impact on property insurance costs (and availability) not only in Massachusetts but across the country.

In 2023, there were 25 weather/climate disaster events in the U.S. with damages exceeding $1 billion, an increase from an average of 18 events per year during the previous five years.

Boost employee health with a focus on small changes

By Jennifer Ranz

Setting big, transformative “New Year, New Me” resolutions — such as extreme weight loss or fitness goals — is a common practice, but experts ranging from the U.S. surgeon general to the American Heart Association say that aiming for smaller, more manageable goals can ultimately be more beneficial and longer-lasting.

Pursuing small changes can help eliminate the “on and off” switch that is common among dieters and exercisers, where people feel they must always be either “on” or “off” a diet or program. MIIA Wellness Manager Courtney Hernandez says setting small, attainable goals helps to create healthy habits that last. Instead of aiming to “eat healthy” all the time, for example, choose a goal such as eating three servings of vegetables per day.

“Don’t make goal-setting and healthy habit formation too hard on yourself,” Hernandez said. “That can be demotivating, and you can’t stick with it. Make your goals attainable for yourself and very specific. Then, at the end of the week, you can feel good checking off the list — that you accomplished what you set out to do.”

Through its Well Aware program for municipalities, the MIIA Health Benefits Trust is offering subscribers and their spouses a series of free, online workshops during the first several months of 2024 covering specific strategies for building healthy habits and eliminating unhealthy ones. In addition, resources on physical and mental well-being, including healthy recipes and mindfulness meditations, are available in the Well Aware section of MIIA’s website.

“Self-care looks different for everyone,” Hernandez said. “For some it means daily exercise, while for others it means fitting in a 10-minute meditation break during the workday to relieve stress.”

Generally speaking, she said, “Any employee, municipal or otherwise, is going to be happier and more productive if they’re taking care of themselves.”

MMHR holiday meeting discusses conflict management

By Anneke Craig

The Massachusetts Municipal Human Resources holiday meeting on Dec. 7 featured registered dietitian Heidi Roth discussing healthy eating during the holidays and Jon Wortmann addressing conflict management.

Roth, owner of Heidi Roth Nutrition, shared strategies to avoid overeating during holiday festivities and to prioritize healthy habits, including how to choose a more balanced plate and practicing mindfulness. She also offered tips for modifying favorite recipes to make them healthier. Her session was accompanied by a virtual recipe swap, where members shared favorite recipes with colleagues.

Wortmann, principal of Novel Communication LLC, presented the workshop “Who Are You? Who Are They? How to Unstick Your Brain and Relationships.” He coached participants on using a series of quick assessments to understand their personality, communication style, conflict style, motivations and values — as well as those of others — in order to navigate conflicts in the workplace and reach resolutions.

Wortmann was assisted by a panel of three MMHR members: Pittsfield Human Resources Director Michael Taylor, South Hadley Assistant Town Administrator and Human Resources Director Chuck Romboletti, and Shrewsbury Human Resources Director Kristina Ordung. Wortmann began by assessing each panelist’s stress level when it came to a recent workplace conflict they had experienced.

“Your alarm ... is trying to protect you,” he said. “So when it sends this spike of adrenaline around the person that drives you crazy, it’s because that relationship isn’t right.”

The panelists then worked through each assessment in real time. Together, the assessments provided a framework that municipal human resources professionals can use to better understand themselves and their employees.

“The thing that’s so important as people professionals, as HR leaders, is that we’re not just compliance experts,” Wortmann said. “In the new world of HR, you are relationship experts. … You have to understand people’s points of view, the things that are most important to them, and the way they think.”

MMA seeks members for its five policy committees

Local officials are invited to fill a limited number of positions available on the MMA’s five policy committees for 2024.

More than 100 local officials from communities across Massachusetts serve on MMA policy committees, which advise the MMA Board of Directors, MMA staff and MMA members on legislative, regulatory and public policy issues.

• Online application form
• Deadline: Jan. 25

The committees also draft resolutions for the MMA’s Annual Business Meeting, municipal best practices for the MMA’s Best Practices series, and bills (biannually) for the MMA’s legislative package.

Each committee has a regular schedule of meetings, usually one per month. Additionally, committee members may be asked to read legislative summaries, bill text, and/or position papers to prepare for meetings.

Each committee is assigned an MMA staff member to assist with its research, consideration of issues, and administrative functions.

Each committee has 23 members, including mayors, select board members, councillors, city and town managers/administrators, and finance committee members, plus four presidential appointees and four technical appointees.

The MMA president names the chair and members of the committee, subject to approval by the MMA Board of Directors.

Those with the interest and time to serve on a policy committee are asked to fill out the application form on the MMA website by Jan. 25. The form provides space to list areas of interest and expertise so that a good match can be made between volunteers and the work of the committees.

About the policy committees

• Fiscal Policy Committee: This committee considers all municipal finance issues. Legislation that has a fiscal impact is referred to this committee from other committees as well. This committee also develops a policy framework for local government financing in the future.

• Policy Committee on Energy and the Environment: This committee formulates policy in the following areas: water quality, water supply, air quality,
Proposed Resolution Supporting a Local-State-Federal Partnership to Address Climate Change, Enhance Resilience, and Bolster Adaptation Initiatives

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas, climate change threatens the environment, public health and public safety of communities in Massachusetts, and has already seriously impacted many of the Commonwealth’s neighborhoods, residents, infrastructure, transportation systems, and economies as extreme weather events, sea level rise, coastal erosion, powerful storms, drought, and flooding become more frequent and severe; and

Whereas, human activity directly and indirectly contributes to the warming of the global atmosphere, and the 2022 Massachusetts Climate Change Assessment has projected that our summers will soon be characterized by an increased number of hotter days on average, and extreme heat poses significant risks to human health; and

Whereas, the Massachusetts Clean Energy and Climate Plan for 2050 (2050 CECP) puts forward specific actions to reduce carbon emissions in several sectors to achieve net-zero carbon emissions by 2050 to ensure national and international climate goals are met; and

Whereas, local leaders and staff are integral environmental stewards of Massachusetts communities, embracing new technologies and best practices, preserving land and natural resources, supplying safe, clean drinking water as well as wastewater and stormwater management, and protecting ecosystems from harm; and

Whereas, in recent years, local governments reported more property insurance losses specifically linked to increases in storms with high winds, lightning strikes, power surges, damaging flooding, and sudden and torrential rainfall; and

Whereas, communities are demanding local action on climate adaptation measures, and rely on local, state and federal leadership on resilience initiatives and mitigation programs to meet those demands; and

Whereas, innovative actions and responses to the climate crisis by local leaders offer many opportunities for physical and financial benefits to their communities, and ensure that environmental and climate justice principles are taken into account; and

Therefore, it is hereby resolved that the members of the Massachusetts Municipal Association support the following essential policy positions to ensure a strong local, state, and federal partnership to address climate change, enhance resilience, and bolster climate adaptation initiatives:

- The state should uphold its commitment to support the 351 communities of the Commonwealth through the Municipal Vulnerability Preparedness (MVP) Program, and should commit to funding the program with at least $100 million per year to significantly increase its capacity to support climate resiliency projects at the local level; and
- The state should continue to support and expand municipal efforts in energy efficiency, decarbonization, and renewable energy projects through dedicated funding, including the Green Communities Program and Climate Leader Communities Program; and
- The state should prioritize the Recommendations of the Climate Chief to respond to the climate crisis in an intersectional, cross-disciplinary manner; and
- The state should provide support for workforce development in key sectors – including public works, water and sewer, engineering, planning and design, sustainability and energy management – to adequately staff municipal governments as they work to make local government operations resilient and prepare to respond to future climate emergencies in real time; and
- The state should evaluate and implement the necessary strategies to decarbonize the energy sector while overcoming barriers to entry, ensuring an equitable and diverse workforce, and should incorporate the perspectives of environmental and climate justice and other priority populations in energy decisions; and
- The state should safeguard and support the ability of municipal leaders to make decisions, avoid preemption of local control, and incentivize responsible, sustainable development; and
- Municipalities should routinely review local planning and zoning bylaws and ordinances for opportunities to increase resilience in their communities, including through the specialized energy code and Zero-Emission-Vehicle-First policies; and
- The state and federal government should provide liability protections for municipal governments in the wake of weather-related incidents and aging infrastructure; and
- The state should further collaborate with municipal partners to provide data, resources and support to communities to ensure adequate preparation for extreme weather events and assist in cleanup efforts; and
- The state, as well as its 351 cities and towns, should continue to utilize federal funding to support existing programs and build new opportunities to reach local, state, federal, and international climate goals as soon as possible.

It is further resolved that a copy of this resolution shall be provided to the Governor, the Members of the Massachusetts General Court, and the Members of the Massachusetts Congressional Delegation.●

Applications due Jan. 15 for finance seminar

By Katie McCue

The MMA and Suffolk University are offering three Municipal Finance Management Seminar programs in 2024, and the application deadline for the spring session is Jan. 15.

The seminar provides an overview of municipal finance in Massachusetts, including the operational aspects of finance structure, systems and processes in cities and towns. Topics include budgeting, financial reporting, treasury functions, property assessment, and costing out contracts.

The seminars will be held via Zoom over the course of five Fridays, with start dates as follows:

- Winter 2024: Jan. 5
- Spring 2024: March 1
- Fall 2024: Oct. 18

The seminar is designed for municipal officials interested in furthering their careers in municipal finance or employees who are new to municipal finance. Applicants must be employed by a city or town, and must have approval from their municipal manager, administrator or mayor.

The application for the 2024 seminars is available online as a fillable PDF. Applicants can choose which seminar they would like to be considered for, and will be informed of their status at the end of the application period.

Spring information sessions

The MMA and Suffolk University will hold an information session for their Municipal Fellowship Program on Feb. 8 at 10 a.m. For more information, visit www.mma.org/events, or click here for Zoom registration.

The Municipal Fellowship Program was launched in 2021 by Suffolk University in partnership with the MMA to offer significant support to exceptional municipal managers and professionals to attend Suffolk’s master’s in public administration program at its Sawyer School of Business.

The fellowship program will provide a scholarship of up to $28,000 while the recipient’s municipality commits to continuing their salary and position while they attend the graduate program part-time.

Applicants must already be accepted for admission to Suffolk’s master’s in public administration program and receive the support of the chief municipal official in their municipality. Consideration will be given to graduates of the MMA-Suffolk Certificate in Local Government Leadership and Management program.

The fellowship program will provide a scholarship of up to $28,000 while the recipient’s municipality commits to continuing their salary and position while they attend the graduate program part-time.

MMA to host webinar on empathetic dialogue skills for volatile times

A free MMA webinar on Jan. 11 will explore the art of communication in challenging times, including how to have productive dialogue with a clear head and how to overcome feelings related to volatility.

In today’s world, where tensions run high and conflicts seem inevitable, finding common ground through dialogue can feel like a daunting challenge — particularly for those who have felt traumatized by news events or past conflicts. Is it even possible to engage in meaningful conversations when everything around us feels so volatile?

Sharon Select Board Chair Kiana Pierre-Louis, the assistant dean of Diversity, Equity and Inclusion at Northeastern University, will share practical tips for fostering constructive dialogue and provide insights into how a trauma response can affect communication.

The 75-minute webinar will begin at noon. Online registration is available.

Federal RAISE grant application period opens

By Adrienne Núñez

The U.S. Department of Transportation has announced that $1.5 billion in grant funding is available for 2024 through the Rebuilding American Infrastructure with Sustainability and Equity, a competitive program that supports investments in road, rail, transit and port projects that have a significant local or regional impact.

RAISE discretionary grants are funded by the Bipartisan Infrastructure Law. Eligible applicants include state and local governments, Tribal governments, and counties. Grantees may receive up to $25 million per project and will receive no less than $1 million for rural-area projects and $5 million for urban-area projects. No more than $225 million will be awarded to a single state.

Half of the funding will be awarded to projects in rural areas, and half to urban areas. At least $15 million will be awarded to Persistent Poverty or Historically Disadvantaged Communities, and projects located in these areas will be eligible for a federal cost share of up to 100%.

RAISE projects are reviewed and evaluated based on safety, environmental sustainability, quality of life, mobility and community connectivity, economic competitiveness and opportunity including tourism, state of good repair, partnership and collaboration, and innovation. Applicants are encouraged to consider how their projects can address climate change, ensure racial equity, and remove barriers to opportunity.

Projects designated “RCN Program Extra” during the federal fiscal 2023 Reconnecting Communities and Neighborhoods program competition, and submitted for consideration under the fiscal 2024 RAISE notice of funding opportunity, will have a greater opportunity to be advanced.

Additional information and the notice of funding opportunity are available online. Questions may be directed to RAISEgrants@dot.gov or 202-366-0301.

The application deadline is Feb. 28, and selections will be announced no later than June 27.

In 2023, RAISE supported 162 projects in all 50 states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, and the Northern Mariana Islands. The list of 2023 awarded projects is available online.

MassTrails accepting grant applications

The application period for the MassTrails grant program is open through Feb. 1 via an online application system.

MassTrails supports recreational trail and shared-use pathway projects with reimbursement grants ranging from $100,000 to $500,000. Applicants must provide a minimum of 20% of the total project cost.

Eligible grant activities include project development, design, engineering, permitting, construction, and maintenance of recreational trails, shared-use pathways, and the amenities that support trails.

Projects require documented landowner permission submitted with the application and are subject to all applicable local, state and federal laws and regulations.

MassTrails grants are reviewed and recommended by the governor’s Inter-Agency Trails Team and the Massachusetts Recreational Trails Advisory Board.

Communities, public entities, Native nations, and nonprofit organizations are eligible. Full grant guidelines and application information is available online.

MassTrails is accepting grant applications through Feb. 1 for recreational trail and shared-use pathway projects.

Let us know about your local news

Every day across the Commonwealth, municipal leaders are figuring out ways to deliver services more efficiently, save taxpayers money, engage more citizens in the vital work of local government, and improve the effectiveness of the layer of government that has the most direct impact on people’s lives. The MMA wants to recognize and help spread the word about these local creative solutions.

If your community has launched a new program or initiative, or has found a unique solution to a common problem, please let us know by filling out our new Local News Tips form on the MMA website.

New councillors get budget primer

Sean Cronin, senior deputy commissioner at the Division of Local Services, left, and Salem Finance Director Anna Freedman speak during the Massachusetts Municipal Councillors’ Association training for newly elected councillors on Dec. 9 in Devens. Cronin focused on the basics of state finance and local aid, and Freedman gave an overview of municipal budgeting.
Board members continued to support a number of tools and resources that are needed to help municipalities address housing affordability.

First, the state needs to take a more flexible approach to policy and provide positive incentives to support and encourage communities to increase housing, such as:

- Fully funding and expanding Chapter 40S to provide supplemental education aid to offset costs resulting from student enrollment growth
- Providing funding and programs to develop distressed properties
- Working with communities to advance mixed housing projects that provide multiple benefits to neighborhoods
- And delivering improved public transportation.

The state should increase funding for affordable housing and homeownership, expanding on programs to provide financial support to renters and first-time homebuyers, which will incentivize developers to create housing stock that matches these purchasers.

Overall, communities and the state can do a better job of educating residents on what affordable and market rate housing looks like, and who would be served through access to affordable apartments and homes, so that residents can have a clearer understanding of the issue, rather than acting out of fear and resisting change.

MMA Board members remained in general agreement that the MMA should continue to advocate for local decision-making on zoning, rather than state-imposed mandates. Board members also recognize, however, that zoning changes to spur housing affordability will be hard to achieve in many communities, especially if the state does not step up with the incentives, resources and education outlined above. This is why the state needs to take a more balanced and flexible approach, and why municipal leaders will continue to face difficult challenges addressing this issue at home.

Incivility: Every municipal leader has a story to tell about rising incivility at the local level, including outbursts by the public and disputes between officials on the same municipal board or across the organization.

MMA Board members discussed ways the MMA can help foster civility and reduce incivility, with recommendations centering on education and support for local officials and employees to understand the root causes of incivility. Training could include best practices for responding effectively, residents’ rights and what they are allowed to do and request, listening skills and strategies for handling difficult conversations, best practices for engaging with the public using remote technology, and successful local initiatives, such as citizen academies and effective communication strategies. Fully aware of the challenges, the MMA has held a number of webinars and member group meetings on these topics, and will continue to do so in 2024!

Other issues

MMA Board members also discussed several issues that certainly warrant further analysis and consideration, though the path forward is less clear at the moment.

Impact of Funding Formulas on Different Types of Communities: It’s clear that there is persistent inequity in the way that many state funding formulas treat small communities vs. larger ones and urban communities vs. rural ones. Solving this is no easy feat, but certainly a worthy endeavor. The MMA has had some success in this area, most recently with fiscal 2024 road funding, which allocates some new funding specifically focused on meeting the needs of rural communities.

Regionalization: Though regionalization is mentioned within the MMA’s four long-range policy goals (below), there was significant discussion of the need for a fresh look at the impediments to regionalization in order to better inform advocacy efforts by the MMA. As revenues tighten and costs increase, the need to consider the cost-saving potential of regionalization will become more important, and the MMA is well-suited to be a leader in that discussion.

Proposition 2½: There was a great deal of concern expressed about the anachronistic nature of Proposition 2½ and the need for a serious and intentional analysis and discussion about its efficacy.
and value. Determining whether this should be an effort that the MMA pursues certainly needs further discussion, and this discussion can be pursued at both the Fiscal Policy Committee and at the Board level.

Migrant Shelter Crisis: The overwhelming demand on the Emergency Assistance shelter program has become a pressing issue for those communities that are serving as hosts to migrant families. The MMA has been serving as an information conduit between the Healey-Driscoll administration and municipalities, and has also been advocating for adequate funding and resources to be provided by the state. As this crisis evolves, the MMA will need to work with members to refine and deliver a clear advocacy message that aims to provide impacted municipalities with the assistance they need on a go-forward basis.

Longstanding priorities

It’s important to note that the MMA has not, and will not, neglect the following longstanding, long-range priorities, which were reaffirmed by the Board during its October session:

- Establishing an effective and sufficient framework for local aid that is equitable for all communities, focusing on core municipal aid programs, including unrestricted municipal aid and education funding
- Modernizing, reforming and addressing unsustainable legacy costs in local personnel systems and employee and retiree benefit structures, including underlying cost drivers, and supporting municipal efforts to attract and retain a skilled and diverse workforce
- Providing local governments with the tools to reduce the cost of government through effective innovation, eliminating unfunded mandates, and promoting regionalization, reforms and cost controls
- Addressing the long-term economic development, housing and infrastructure needs of cities and towns, especially in local, regional and statewide transportation systems, aging local and regional environmental systems, planning for and managing the impacts of climate change, facilitating local initiatives to increase housing affordability, and ensuring that communities have the modern and fully functioning facilities they need to deliver services to residents and businesses.

Meeting space wanted

Does your municipality have a public meeting space that would be appropriate for an MMA event?

With more than 60 member group meetings each year, the MMA uses several different types of function spaces around the state. The use of municipally owned meeting rooms greatly improves the organization’s ability to sponsor affordable educational events in a variety of places.

To offer your town or city’s municipal function space, contact Timmery Kuck, the MMA’s conference and meeting manager, at tkuck@mma.org.

ANNUAL MEETING

• A range of informative and timely workshops
• A lively Trade Show with more than 200 exhibitors featuring the latest services and solutions for cities and towns
• Member business meetings and important policy discussions
• Countless networking opportunities

The MMA’s Annual Meeting website has the very latest information about the largest conference for municipal officials in the state.

The 2024 MMA Annual Meeting theme is “Turning Passion Into Action,” recognizing the dedication that local leaders bring to their work and their problem-solving approach to myriad challenges.

“The MMA Annual Meeting fosters an atmosphere of collegiality and encourages a growth mindset,” said Sudbury Select Board Member Lisa Kouchakdjian, who was the first registrant for the 2024 conference. “To put it simply, attending the conference can make me a better public servant!”

Speakers
The speaker lineup includes:

• Opening Keynote: Eddie Glaude Jr. — bestselling author, Princeton professor and political commentator who provides a better understanding of race and democracy in America
• Opening Session: Gov. Maura Healey — just days before she files her state budget plan for fiscal 2025
• Women Elected Municipal Officials Leadership Luncheon: Melissa Hoffer — first-ever cabinet-level climate chief in the nation
• Saturday Keynote: Gina McCarthy — the White House’s first-ever climate advisor, a former EPA administrator, and one of the country’s most prominent voices on climate change and the environment
• Lt. Gov. Kim Driscoll — during the MMA Annual Business Meeting
• U.S. Senators Elizabeth Warren and Ed Markey — during the MMA Annual Business Meeting

Workshops
Over two days, 21 workshops will cover key municipal issues such as artificial intelligence, boosting local business districts, building affordable housing, community outreach, climate change and property coverage, cybersecurity, data-driven decision making, decarbonization, diversity, equity and inclusion, education funding, federal funds, state and local finances, happiness in the workplace, labor law, labor relations, managing a disaster, municipal law, solid waste contracts, and unemployment fraud. (See website for details.)

Trade Show
The MMA is continually updating the list of exhibitors for its sold-out Trade Show, which will be open on Friday, Jan. 19, from 11:15 a.m. to 5 p.m., and on Saturday, Jan. 20, from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. The Trade Show will also feature six Learning Lab sessions on Friday, Jan. 19.

Companies, nonprofits and government agencies interested in exhibiting at the meeting can find details and contact information on the MMA website.

Other features
First-time Annual Meeting attendees will get a special welcome during an event-opening orientation session from 8 to 9 a.m. The session is an opportunity to learn from seasoned MMA members about the best strategies for making the most of the Annual Meeting experience, as well as MMA membership.

A special session on Saturday morning, “Polishing Your Interview Skills,” will feature a panel of executive recruiters offering advice.

The two-day event also features networking receptions, awards programs and other activities.

Attendees can use the event’s free mobile app to make the most of their conference experience. A guide to accessing the app will be emailed to registrants in the weeks leading up to the Annual Meeting.

Only online registrations will be accepted. No registrations can be accepted by mail or over the phone. The MMA accepts credit cards for Annual Meeting transactions, or we will invoice your municipality after the meeting. MMA staff are happy to help anyone who needs assistance. Attendees may use their unique username and password to register. Those who don’t have a username and password, or who have forgotten them, may email amregistrations@mma.org.

MMA Partnership Program members qualify for member rates. Partners must have been in good standing as of Dec. 30, 2023, to be eligible to register and attend the MMA Annual Meeting & Trade Show. The deadline for new MMA Partner Program applications was Nov. 30. Partnership Program renewals or applications will not be accepted during the Annual Meeting.

After the early registration deadline of Jan. 10, all registrations will be at the on-site rate of $290.

Hotel information
The MMA’s discounted room block has sold out at the Sheraton Boston Hotel, located adjacent to the Hynes, but rooms can still be booked at the regular rate by contacting the Sheraton Boston directly at 888-627-7054.

Other hotel options in the area include:

Policing Reform Law. The panel has been co-chaired by Sen. Michael Brady and Rep. Ken Gordon, who also co-chair the Legislature’s Joint Committee on Public Service.

The panel offered an interim final report in March of 2022, and its charge was recently extended into the current legislative session.

The chairs of the special legislative commission said they intend to propose legislation — which is not yet available — that will include the “hybrid” pathway, as well as many other recommendations from the commission’s interim final report. Its policy recommendations are likely to include:

- Adding flexibility for municipalities in providing residency requirements
- Adjusting the formula for entry-level certifications (from $2n+1 to $3n+1)
- Supporting and investing in cadet programs
- Lowering barriers to the civil service exam fee waivers
- Increasing the Civil Service Commission budget and enhancing its authority
- Supporting diversity scholarship models

In the coming weeks, a bill is expected to be reported out of the Joint Committee on Public Service and forward in the legislative process.

The Joint Committee on Public Service has also released its presentation from the Dec. 12 meeting of the special commission.

that priority.

“We need your partnership. We need your best ideas. And frankly, we need your courage, too,” she said. “We’ve got to be aggressive.”

In November 2022, Healey became the state’s first woman and first openly gay candidate to be elected governor, after serving two four-year terms as the state’s attorney general. She has been a frequent speaker at MMA Annual Meetings since her time as attorney general.

Raised in Hampton Falls, New Hampshire, Healey came to Massachusetts to attend Harvard College, where she majored in government, was co-captain of the women’s basketball team, and graduated with honors in 1992. After graduation, she spent two years playing professional basketball as a starting point guard in Europe before returning to earn her law degree at Northeastern University School of Law.

Healey began her legal career as a clerk in the U.S. District Court for the District of Massachusetts, followed by more than seven years in private practice at Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale and Dorr. She also served as a special assistant district attorney in Middlesex County.

In 2007, she was hired by her predecessor as attorney general, Martha Coakley, as chief of the Civil Rights Division, where she spearheaded the state’s challenge to the federal Defense of Marriage Act. Under Coakley, she also served as chief of the Public Protection and Advocacy Bureau and chief of the Business and Labor Bureau. She resigned in 2013 to run for attorney general in 2014, winning her first campaign for elected office. She was reelected in 2018.

While Healey was the first woman elected to serve as governor of Massachusetts, Jane Swift served as acting governor from 2001 to 2003 after Paul Cellucci resigned to become the U.S. ambassador to Canada.

infrastructure, especially in light of the tight cap on local property tax revenue and recent cost escalations.

For the MMA, other key objectives early in 2024 will be investments in municipal infrastructure, housing, climate resiliency, and bills that ease unnecessary burdens on local government in Massachusetts.

Additional policy priorities of the House and Senate that are expected to get attention this year include health care reform, gun control, mental health services, economic development, early education and care, clean energy, and more. Additionally, the Legislature will make decisions on whether to propose alternatives to the seven potential questions making progress toward the 2024 general election ballot.

The legislative session formally ends on July 31. To have a realistic chance at passage this session, most legislation must move out of committee by Feb. 7 (governed by a legislative joint rule) unless it receives an extension.
Easthampton

City updates hate crimes policy

With war raging abroad and hate crimes increasing nationally, Easthampton recently updated its Hate Crimes Policy to improve public safety, promote inclusivity, and provide greater clarity around its investigation processes and community outreach.

Easthampton had been periodically revising its policy after the 2020 murder of George Floyd, according to Mayor Nicole LaChapelle, and to reflect court rulings. But given concerns about white supremacists locally, and increased antisemitic and Islamophobic activity after the Oct. 7 Hamas attack on Israel, the city further refined its policy and released it in November.

“We felt like we really needed to update the policy and get that out to the public,” LaChapelle said. “And send a very clear signal that hate has never been tolerated in Easthampton, and it is not an antiquated, definitional approach. It is top of mind, and with the most current information possible.”

The country has seen alarming increases in hate crimes recently. Citing federal statistics, the Anti-Defamation League said Massachusetts had 412 hate crimes in 2021, a 33% jump over the previous year. The country saw a 38% increase in white supremacy propaganda efforts from 2021 to 2022, with Massachusetts ranking second in propaganda activity, after Texas, according to the ADL. The state also saw a 41% increase in antisemitic incidents over that period, with 71 municipalities experiencing at least one incident.

Easthampton has seen white supremacist activity, including “some really discouraging, disgusting rumors” on social media and a white supremacist group leafleting in a neighborhood, LaChapelle said.

Easthampton reviewed the policies from Northampton, Holyoke and Cambridge as part of its update process, LaChapelle said. Officials worked with the city attorney and relied on the Massachusetts Chiefs of Police Association, the U.S. Department of Justice and civil rights groups for information.

“We did not want this policy to be aspirational,” LaChapelle said. “We wanted this policy to be hands-on, written, issued and on the streets.”

The policy details how police need to collect and document evidence and move a case up the chain of command. It emphasizes the need to gather evidence, including hate literature, spray paint cans, and symbolic objects; instructs investigators to record suspect statements verbatim (“Exact language is critical”); calls for officer training on hate crimes; and elaborates on the role of the department’s civil rights liaison.

After an incident, the city expects police to place the alleged crime in context, by identifying any previous incidents in the same area, or against the same victim; identifying patterns, or hate groups potentially involved; familiarizing themselves with local hate groups; and complying with state and federal hate crime data collection and reporting requirements.

Easthampton’s policy also emphasizes community outreach and hate crime prevention, including engaging the media and communicating with community organizations, religious institutions, neighborhood groups and residents in targeted communities; identifying sources of support for victims; keeping victims updated; and arranging for translators if necessary. The policy encourages public forums to address hate crimes and violence generally, and, where appropriate, expanded prevention programs in schools.

“This revised policy reflects our dedication to fostering a community where everyone feels secure, regardless of background,” Police Chief Robert Alberti said in a statement about the policy.

LaChapelle said the update builds on work already underway to improve interaction and trust between first responders and residents. Two years ago, the city contracted with Clinical & Support Options to have a social worker co-responding to incidents with the police, and last year, the city paired that with a community social worker and a public health nurse to support victims, she said. The work also inspired the police department to write a separate grant for a staff therapist, she said, to support first responders who face these difficult situations.

Methuen

City takes collaborative approach to mental health, homelessness, addiction issues

In an effort to address concerns about mental health, addiction and homelessness in the community, Methuen has convened a monthly mental health task force with representation from across municipal departments to collaborate on addressing the issues.

“Rolled up in the issue of mental health is addiction, is homelessness,” said Mayor Neil Perry. “And we started looking at various ways to combat it to make sure that a, each department knew what other departments were doing, b, we were maximizing our approach to obtaining grants, and that c., the first year and each year after we have a plan for our opioid settlement money.

“Even though it is a 20-plus person team, there has been great cohesion and great focus on direction,” he added.

Perry said that convening the group, which kicked off over the summer, has allowed departments to learn from each other.

“Being able to share all this between all these departments, and other departments being able to use these ideas, I think has been the biggest positive by bringing everyone together at the same table,” said City Councillor and task force member Joel Faretra.

Perry said a proposal to the City Council for how to use the first $380,000 in opioid settlement funds includes expanding access to Care Solace, a mental health coordination service used in the school system, to anyone in the city, as well as funding for two patrol officers, two EMTs, and increased education and messaging in the community.

Following the suicides of two teenagers last year, Faretra said struggling populations like students, veterans and seniors also need support, and the task force is looking to provide a social worker to support the senior population as well as clinicians to be available for first responders.

The task force is also requesting increased access to Narcan, additional support for the Health and Human Services Department, and for treatment and recovery efforts.

Perry noted that by the end of November, overdoses in 2023 had already exceeded data for 2020, 2021 or 2022.

He said the city is expecting an additional $68,000 in opioid settlement funds in fiscal 2025, with additional funding through fiscal 2039. Faretra said the task force has proposed seeking additional funding through the local meals tax.

Police Chief Scott McNamara said about a quarter of calls to the department “have a connection to mental health issues, and these are calls that we’re going to over and over.”

“We immediately understood we needed to get mental health clinicians embedded into the department,” he said.

The Police Department has partnered with Front Line, a behavioral health company that works with numerous municipal police departments in the state, to pursue and facilitate the use of two grants as a part of the citywide effort to address mental health concerns.

The first is a $550,000 Justice Mental Health Collaborative Partnership grant from the U.S. Department of Justice’s Bureau of Justice Assistance provided over three years. The grant will support the partnership between the Police Department and Front Line and the creation of a secondary co-response team and community support center. The secondary team will consist of a clinician and peer support specialist who can respond to a scene when requested by an officer. The responders will conduct an initial assessment and develop a care plan, including connection or transfer to additional services.

The second grant, $400,000 from the U.S. Department of Justice’s Office of Community Oriented Policing Services, will fund a clinical co-response clinician to respond to mental health events alongside officers who are trained in Crisis Intervention Team techniques, creating a primary co-response team. The grant will also provide access to Front Line outpatient services and after-hours clinical tele-services.

“The importance of the task force going forward is taking a look at what we are doing, measuring … what’s the result,” Perry said. “Is it having a positive impact? And if it’s not in certain areas, how do we take a look at those areas and adjust. Waiting is not helping anybody.”

Cambridge/ Anmoughcawgen

City to add Indigenous language translations to some street signs

As it seeks to acknowledge its Indigenous past and present, the city of Cambridge will soon install bilingual street signs translated in the Massachusett language on several streets in the eastern part of town.

By March, the city hopes to erect 70 to 80 new street signs on First through Eighth streets as part of the African American and Indigenous Peoples Historical Reckoning Project, which has received $180,000 through Cambridge’s participatory budgeting process to recognize local Indigenous history through the street signs and other projects, and to repair and enhance the city’s Black historical markers.

Though Indigenous-language signs are more common on reservations, Cambridge may be one of the first municipalities to have them in this state, if not the country, according to people involved in the project. The project’s organizers said they hope the Indigenous street signs will encourage greater awareness of local tribal history and of current Native American residents, and that the increased awareness will lead to more projects and programming centered around Indigenous history and culture.

“The city of Cambridge is very committed to acknowledging the diversity in our community, and to equity and inclusion efforts,” said Sarah Burks, a preservation planner for the Historical Commission. “This is something that the citizens of Cambridge voted for, and it’s something they wanted to fund, so the city staff are committed to seeing it through.”

Resident Sage Carbone, a descendant of the Massachusett Indian Tribe and a member of the Northern Narragansett Indian Tribe of Rhode Island, proposed the idea in 2021 through the city’s participatory budgeting process, in which residents vote on funding for one-time

Timothy McInerney became the new town administrator in Northborough on Dec. 11. McInerney previously served as the interim director of inspectional services in Worcester from January to September 2021, as the interim administrator and later town administrator in Grafton from 2008 to 2020, as interim town administrator in Ware in 2006, as interim town manager in Uxbridge in 2005, as town administrator in Seekonk from 2002 to 2004, and as town manager in Salisbury from 2001 to 2002. He also worked as a safety service director in Mt. Healthy, Ohio; as a human resources consultant in Lexington County, South Carolina; and as an assistant budget analyst for the South Carolina General Assembly.

McInerney has a master’s degree in public administration from the University of South Carolina, and a bachelor’s degree in political science from Suffolk University.

In Northborough, he replaces John Coderre, who left the position last spring. Michael Gallagher had been serving as the interim administrator.

On Jan. 1, E. Denise Simmons was sworn in as Cambridge’s new mayor for the 2024-2025 term.

A lifelong Cambridge resident, Simmons will be serving her 12th term on the City Council (since 2002) and her third term as mayor.

In Cambridge, the mayor is selected from the City Council.

In 2008, Simmons made history by becoming the nation’s first Black, openly lesbian mayor, as well as the first Black woman mayor in Massachusetts.

She has a long history of service in Cambridge, including as executive director of the Cambridge Civic Unity Committee in the 1980s and as a member of the Cambridge School Committee in the 1990s.

Dan Rourke was sworn in as Lowell’s newest mayor on Jan. 2, after having been chosen among his fellow city councillors to serve in the role.

Rourke was first elected to the council in 2013, and was the city’s vice mayor in 2016. While on the council, he has served as chair of the public safety, neighborhood services, elections and substance abuse subcommittees. He is also an assistant chief probation officer at the Lowell District Court.

Melissa Pimentel, who has extensive experience in human resources management, joined the MMA on Jan. 2 as the organization’s first human resources manager.

From May 2022 until recently, Pimentel served as the human resources director for the Easton Public Schools. Previously, she worked as the personnel administrator for the town of Dartmouth, from June 2013 to 2022; as the human resources and diversity administrator for the Somerville Public Schools, from 2011 to 2013; as a human resources generalist for the town of Braintree, from 2004 to 2007; and as the personnel assistant for the Dartmouth Public Schools, from 2004 to 2007.

She has a bachelor’s degree in human resource management from Bridgewater State University, and an associate’s degree in office administration from Bristol Community College.

Michael Case joined the Washington Select Board after winning a special election on Oct. 21. He replaced John Fish, who stepped down from the board over the summer. Case’s term ends in the spring of 2025.

Paul Wetzel won a Nov. 4 special election to fill a vacant seat on the Williamsburg Select Board. His predecessor, David Mathers, died in July after serving 16 years on the board. Wetzel’s term ends in the spring of 2025.

Dover Board of Selectmen Chair Robert Springett died on Dec. 4 at age 76.

Springett served the town in numerous roles over the past 17 years, including the last five as a selectman and terms on the School Committee and the Capital Budget Committee. With an accounting degree from St. Peter’s College and a law degree from Fordham University, he spent three decades working at JPMorgan before retiring as a managing director in 1995.

Mary Waselchuk, the first woman to be elected to Peabody’s City Council five decades ago, died on Nov. 23 at age 91.

Waselchuk first joined the council in 1978 as the Ward 3 councillor, and later became an at-large councillor and council president during her 16-year tenure. She also served on the council with her brother, Frederick Murtagh. She had worked at the Essex County Administrative Office before becoming a real estate agent.

Video features Franklin officials discussing road salt reduction

By Jennifer Kavanaugh

Just in time for winter, two public works officials from Franklin are featured in a short video offering advice on treating roads in ways that promote safety while minimizing impacts on the environment.

"On the Road With Salt" features Public Works Director Robert “Brutus” Cantoreggi and Carlos Rebelo, the town’s highway and grounds superintendent, describing their efforts to balance safety with protecting the water supply and the local environment.

“As a public works guy, I wear a lot of different hats,” Cantoreggi said in the video. "On one hand, I’m dealing with my residents, and they want the safest roads possible and the quickest way and the cheapest way to do it. On the other hand, I run the water department, and in the water department, they want quality drinking water.”

Salty snow and ice melt flows from roads into water bodies and groundwater, where it can harm and even kill freshwater animals such as snails, frogs and trout, and can cause drought-like symptoms in plants and health problems for people.

Cantoreggi and Rebelo said they’ve made a variety of efforts to reduce their use of salt on the town’s 180 lane miles of road: targeted salting in high-traffic and hilly areas instead of oversalting the whole town; checking road treatment trucks each year to ensure that they are correctly calibrated; training employees on striving for the goal of using no more than 250 pounds of salt per road mile; pretreating roads during the three or four days before a storm; and educating the public to stay off the roads during storms and to reduce speeds when they do use them.

As a result, the Franklin officials said, they have reduced salt use by about one third.

"Salt is a problem, and we don’t want to contribute to it,” Rebelo said in the video. “We want to be a solution.”

Produced by Trillium Studios Film, the nearly 8-minute video is part of the Turnaround Films series, which highlights innovative solutions to the changing environment. Cantoreggi said the video was filmed last winter and completed in the fall.

Electric sector

Revised drafts will be submitted to the Department of Public Utilities in January for their review process.

The Grid Modernization Advisory Council and electric sector modernization plan system was created by a major 2022 climate law, which requires the state’s distribution companies to prepare plans to upgrade the distribution system while also achieving the following objectives:

- Improve grid reliability, communications and resiliency
- Enable increased, timely adoption of renewable energy and distributed energy resources
- Promote energy storage and electrification technologies for decarbonization
- Prepare for climate-driven impacts on transmission and distribution systems
- Accommodate transportation and building electrification, and other new loads
- Minimize or mitigate impacts on ratepayers

The climate law also created the Electric Vehicle Infrastructure Coordinating Council and the Clean Energy Transmission Working Group, among other programs. Gov. Maura Healey recently appointed a Commission on Clean Energy Infrastructure Siting and Permitting.

The collaborative process these groups have been engaging in will support future electrification efforts across Massachusetts. The work is intended to help shift key sectors away from fossil fuels with properly supported electricity generated through renewable energy.

The draft ESMPs are available on the Grid Modernization Advisory Council website, along with the input of the council and related materials.
Adding to the challenge for municipal governments is that city- and town-owned buildings are typically diverse in age, structural materials and construction practices, which may require specific management plans for each structure.

Kenneth Wertz, executive director of the Massachusetts Facilities Administrators Association and the National School Plant Management Association, said newer building codes promote higher efficiency construction, including a tighter building envelope.

“This is ideal for managing extreme cold and extreme heat efficiently,” he said, “but it can create a lower margin of error when dealing with water intrusion.”

What municipalities can do

When it comes to climate change readiness, municipalities can start by getting a full picture of maintenance needs across town buildings, Wertz said, and then establishing a plan for regular maintenance.

1. Complete a thorough assessment of all buildings, including appliances and systems that require regular maintenance and/or replacement (boilers, HVAC systems, roofs, etc.). Software systems are available for tracking, and MIIA often covers this cost for its members via risk management grants.

2. Implement capital planning that anticipates maintenance needs and includes a realistic timeline for maintenance and replacement. With tight budgets, recommissioning systems may need to be completed on a building-by-building, rotating basis.

3. Set an amount aside in the municipal budget for maintenance. Consult facilities staff for input, and look at what municipalities that are comparable in location and size are doing.

4. Take advantage of state and federal funding earmarked for carbon footprint reduction to help with appliance and systems upgrades. Replacing an old boiler with a newer, high-efficiency system can bring an added benefit of helping to prevent malfunctions (and pipe freeze-ups).

5. Leverage new technologies, such as remote shutoff valves, that can be used in conjunction with plumbing and water level sensors.

Batchelder said municipal officials need to be aware of trends in the property insurance marketplace and how municipal insurance could be impacted moving forward. Volatility in the reinsurance market is leading to higher costs, and could reduce the availability of property insurance as a fallback when disaster strikes. Planning ahead and avoiding maintenance deferral is more critical than ever.

capital projects. Ultimately, her proposal was combined with a proposal to restore and improve Cambridge’s Black historical markers. Work on the Black historical markers has started, Burks said, but the city is trying to hire a new staff member to move that project forward.

The Indigenous project reflects a heritage that has always existed, but was not always acknowledged. In the first state to receive an Indigenous name (Massachusetts translates to “great-hill-small-place”), Indigenous peoples lived in an area called Anmoughcawgen, which means either “fishing weir” or “beaver dam.” After European colonization, the area became known as Newtowne, and later Cambridge.

In proposing the translated signs, Carbone said she was inspired by seeing Indigenous-language signs on reservations, and was motivated by the lack of Indigenous representation in diversity programming and initiatives.

“If the city wants to increase the visibility of Indigenous peoples and languages, this is an economical way to do it,” Carbone said. “A street sign is not a huge investment. What the investment is needs...

The group started with the numbered streets in East Cambridge because those words would be the easiest to translate. They also approved a design containing the standard green background and white lettering for the official street name, with a purple strip along the top bearing the translated name in white letters.

At some major intersections, additional, smaller signs placed lower on the poles will direct people to a website with background on the project, information about the Massachusetts language and history, and audio pronunciations of the translated street names.

After completing the initial phase, the group will look at other ways to increase Indigenous visibility in Cambridge. Carbone wants the project to inspire other cities and towns.

“That’s the major hope,” Carbone said, “is that municipalities will be more open to relationships with tribal nations.”

Municipal Cybersecurity Awareness Grant Program opens

The Executive Office of Technology Services and Security has opened the Municipal Cybersecurity Awareness Grant Program for 2024. The program improves overall cybersecurity posture by helping organizations mitigate their human risk through awareness training and monthly threat simulations (phishing campaigns).

The program is open to all local government agencies (municipalities, public school districts, libraries, police departments, fire departments, planning commissions, and municipally run utility departments and airports), as well as members of the PERAC Retirement System.

The Office of Municipal and School Technology, within the Executive Office of Technology Services and Security, procures the user licenses and manages the program, making it free to participating organizations.

Applications are now available, and the application period will close when all available seats are taken, or on Jan. 10, 2024, whichever occurs first.

Details about the program are available on the program’s website.

POLICY COMMITTEES

solid waste and recycling, hazardous waste, wetlands, coastal areas, wastewater treatment, renewable energy and energy conservation.

• Policy Committee on Municipal and Regional Administration: This committee considers issues that relate to the organization, structure, efficiency, and productivity of local and regional government and the relationships between the two levels of government. Issues include housing and zoning, procurement, economic development, regulation of marijuana, open meeting law and public records law, public health and safety, and licensing.

• Policy Committee on Personnel and Labor Relations: This committee considers issues in the following areas: collective bargaining, civil service, employee benefits and pension reform.

• Policy Committee on Public Works, Transportation and Public Utilities: This committee considers issues that relate to regional and metropolitan transportation, transportation planning, the relationship between local governments and the Massachusetts Department of Transportation, and the question of local control in joint state-local public works programs.

The MMA is the one voice that advocates for direct aid and support for core municipal and public education services provided by every community in Massachusetts. The MMA’s advocacy efforts are focused on a single goal: Building strong communities in Massachusetts.
